AMERICA'S HIV REPORT

CDC 'DEEPLY CONCERNED' BY RISE IN CASES AMONG GAY AND BISEXUAL BLACK MEN

From news services

The new numbers on HIV in America are out, and officials say there is some cause for alarm.

While the number of new HIV infections in the U.S. has remained steady, at around 50,000 cases a year over the past four years, the new data show the largest increases were among gay and bisexual men. Of that group, young black men had what the agency called "alarming increases," according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The report about HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, was published online Wednesday in the scientific journal PLoS ONE.

"We are deeply concerned by the alarming rise in new HIV infections in young, black gay and bisexual men and the continued impact of HIV among young gay and bisexual men of all races," said Dr. Jonathan Mermin, director of the CDC's Division of HIV/

AIDS Prevention. "We cannot allow the health of a new generation of gay men to be lost to a preventable disease. It's time to renew the focus on HIV among gay men and confront the homophobia and stigma that all too often accompany this disease."

It's not just African-Americans who are disproportionately affected. The data suggest that communities of color are shouldering a heavier burden. In 2009, blacks made up 14 percent of the population but accounted for 44 percent of all new infections. Their infection rate was almost eight times that of whites. The rate among black men was the highest of any group—more than six times that of white men.

The infection rate among black women was 15 times higher than white women. Hispanics make up about 16 percent of the population and 20 percent of new HIV infections. Their rate of infection is about three times that of whites. REUTERS, CNN

Those nipples better be real

My world has, for the most part, only gotten better as CGI has improved. It's let me visit Jurassic Park, follow shifty-eyed Gollum to Mordor and witness Spider-Man swing through the New York skyline in a way the comic books never could capture. But with great power comes great responsibility.

There is a strange and disturbing trend creeping up in my digitally altered movie world: CGI nudity.

Computer-generated imaging allows modest actors to be digitally altered. Pasties and panties are erased and nipples are drawn on to paint prudish actors into liberated, flawlessly beautiful beings.

Olivia Wilde, the luscious brunette, recently revealed she has a topless scene in this weekend's new movie "The Change-Up"—thanks to CGI. This news comes on the heels of Jessica Alba's much-ballyhooed CGI shower scene in 2010's "Machete." Is this the future of film nudity? A nip slip with the click of a mouse?

Sure, I would have remained in the dark about Wilde's fake areolas had she not used the factoid as conversation fodder on "Jimmy Kimmel Live." No one (probably) would have been able to tell they weren't really her nipples if she hadn't owned up to it. Not to mention there are plenty of movies with uncredited body doubles masquerading as your favorite celeb's perfect rump. The question is: Where does it end?

If you can computer-generate a nipple, why not go further and create full-frontal nudity or graphic sex scenes post-production? Will actors need to have "no-CGI nudity" clauses in their contracts? Will the price of real nudity be a negotiation point? $5 million for a digital areola, but $10 million for the real thing?

Moreover, what about the ick factor of fake nudity? At a certain point, CGI'd humans stop looking realistic and start looking creepy. It's why Tom Hanks in "The Polar Express" gave you worse nightmares than Freddy Krueger ever did.

There's also the obvious flaw of CGI nudity: It isn't real. Excluding gratuitous nudity that can easily be handed off to a body double, sometimes being naked is important to the authenticity of the movie magic. The moment in which the two lovers fall into bed won't be as convincing because acting naked isn't the same as actually being naked. Those titillating scenes will lack the sexuality and vulnerability of being naked.

Let's not forget that nudity on film extends beyond just sex scenes. The big reveal in "The Crying Game" would have fallen flat if the iconic shot had been computer code. The rape scene in "A Clockwork Orange" wouldn't have been as terribly realistic and, therefore, as horrifying without the actual nudity.

The fake nudity debate shouldn't be as black-and-white as "Is it right or wrong?" My concern: Is it necessary? This isn't an issue of using CGI to manufacture a stunt that is too dangerous for a real person—it's just a boob. We don't need Industrial Light and Magic's help to re-create a nipple.

A life cut short

Teen gunned down in Bronzeville remembered for love of basketball

Chicago Tribune

Located just east of the Dan Ryan Expressway in Bronzeville, Metcalfe Park is considered a safe place where young basketball players show off their skills, old men play cards and families cook out.

But on Thursday, teenage boys gathered quietly, still in shock that 13-year-old Darius Brown had been shot a day earlier in broad daylight while playing in a five-on-five, full-court basketball game.

The diminutive player had just high-fived teammate Steve Barron for scoring a basket when gunfire erupted from a passing car at about 5:30 p.m., Barron said.

Everybody ran.

Barron fled west to the baseball diamond, Oaklei Lofton hid behind a tree and Ronald Craig ducked behind a bench.

But Darius was struck by a bullet in his neck while still on the court. He hopped over a bench, ran past the drinking fountain and jumped over another bench back onto the basketball court, where he collapsed. Dried blood marked the trail he took.

Barron said he and other boys on the court ran to Darius, held him and told the dying boy, "You're strong. We love you."

On Thursday night Chicago police made an appeal to the public for anyone with information about the shooting to come forward. Church and community groups quickly raised a $9,000 reward for the arrest of the gunman.

Police released a surveillance video image from a nearby building that shows a white car—described as a late-model four-door sedan—near the crime scene. Wentworth Area Sgt. Shawn McGavock said multiple gunshots came from a similar-looking car occupied by perhaps two individuals.

Basketball was a way of life for Darius, who went by the nickname "Bay-Bay" and aspired to be in the pros.

"He watched it, he played it, all day," his mother, Stephanie Brown, said. "... I know he died doing what he loved to do."

He spent hours at the park with his basketball buddies, many of whom were older than he was, though they credited him with being the better player.

"He was going to be the one to make it," Devonte Grant, 16, said.

Rodes Hunt, basketball coach at Holy Angels School, where Darius was to enter the eighth grade in a few weeks, agreed:

"He would have been in the NBA. He was that good."

High lead levels found in city homes

High lead levels were found in drinking water in seven of 38 Chicago homes tested by federal regulators this spring, according to records obtained by the Tribune. Environmental Protection Agency officials still are analyzing the tests, but the results give credence to concerns that testing methods used for two decades could significantly underestimate consumers' exposure to the toxic metal.

Giordano's owner files lawsuit

Bust out the space raft—Mars may have saltwater

There are no little green men yet, but scientists have found new evidence for possible saltwater flows on Mars.

The discovery was announced at a NASA news conference Thursday.

Alfred McEwen, lead author of the Science study showing these observations, and his team have been observing Mars using the HiRISE camera aboard the Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter. His team has identified features on some slopes of the planet that appear to fade in the winter and come back in the spring.

These flows occur near the Mars equator, where temperatures would be suitable for liquid water.

The water is expected to be salty because previous study of the planet has shown that its surface is salty.

Seven such sites on the planet have been confirmed, with 20 more possible.

The study does not prove water exists but identifies it as the best explanation.

"I think it's going to be laboratory experiments on Earth that give us the best confirmation or refutation," McEwen said.

IN OTHER SOLAR SYSTEM NEWS ...

A primordial collision of two moons that once orbited Earth explains why the present-day moon is a bit lopsided and its far side much rockier than the lunar surface facing our planet, scientists said Wednesday. Research published in the journal Nature suggests the early moon was shadowed by a smaller companion satellite, about one-thirtieth of its own mass, as the two bodies circled the infant Earth in tandem more than 4 billion years ago.

Scandal touches CNN's Morgan

AND NEXT, THE TWINS

The Sox are going from the shark-infested waters of a home-stand against the Tigers, Red Sox and Yankees to the piranha tank in Minnesota.

While the records may not indicate it, the next three days don't get any easier for the Sox, who find themselves in danger of falling behind the fourth-place Twins. The recent history of the Twins' domination has been well documented. This season the Twins have won seven of eight meetings.

"I wish I knew [the reason]," said Mark Buehrle, who opens the Central Division series Friday. "I thought it was always the dome, but once we got out of that place, it seems like we played better but the numbers aren't [much] better."

In his last eight starts in Minnesota, Buehrle has gone 1-6, but at least the atmosphere is better in an open-air stadium.

"It's 100 times better," Buehrle said. "I think everything to do with that dome was bad." TRIBUNE

Soaring— or just sore?

In mixed martial arts, it seems fighters always are this close to a title shot or a phone call away from being released. Here are 10 fighters on the move—five on the rise, five on a downward slope.

▲ Tito Ortiz: A few weeks ago Ortiz was facing retirement when he took on Ryan Bader, but he found the power to choke Bader out. Ortiz faces Rashad Evans on Saturday; if he wins he could get a title shot.

▲ Dan Henderson: After beating Fedor Emelianenko on Saturday at the Sears Centre, the Strikeforce light heavyweight champ is in position for a possible return to the UFC.

▲ Anderson Silva: Not losing in four years and owning a 14-fight win streak is simply unbelievable.

▲ Kenny Florian: He lost a chance at the lightweight championship, then moved down to featherweight. He'll have another shot at a title when he fights Jose Aldo in October.

▲ Miesha Tate: She won Strikeforce's women's bantamweight title in dramatic fashion and looks to a possible rematch against Sarah Kaufman in the near future.

▼ Fedor Emelianenko: After suffering his third straight loss and second by TKO, there is talk The Last Emperor might be forced to hang up his gloves.

▼ Nate Marquardt: The up-and-comer failed his medicals before a recent fight because of what was later found to be testosterone replacement therapy. He was immediately released.

▼ Roy Nelson: He's lost two in a row and his stamina is severely lacking, and that makes UFC president Dana White unhappy. If Nelson loses to Mirko Cro Cop in October, he's likely getting his walking papers.

▼ Ken Shamrock: The former WWE star is setting up a "fight" with James Toney that won't use modern MMA rules. He's ruining whatever legacy he has by agreeing to this event.

▼ Wanderlei Silva: Losing six of his last eight fights—four of them knockouts—puts Silva's future in doubt. TED GRUBER BLOGS ABOUT MIXED MARTIAL ARTS AT CHICAGONOW.COM/MMA-DISPUTED.

| 1 How is Bears practice different at Soldier Field than it is in Bourbonnais? | You tell me which is better: A Lakefront view or training in boofoo? | The turf's better in Bourbonnais. I wish I were joking. | It prepares you for games in actual spaceships. God, I phoned that one in. | Much harder to get away with the drinking needed to ease the pain of some of our offseason moves. | They're in the middle of nowhere in Bourbonnais. |
| 2 How are you counting down the days until the Bears' first preseason game Aug. 13? | With a whiskey smash. Assemble the following: Bourbon, lemons, mint, simple syrup. Mix, then drink. | I drafted Caleb Hanie first in my preseason-only fantasy league! | I use the Roman calendar. Pretty standard. Oh man, that was even worse. | With my Bears Advent Calendar: Today's window had another flamed-out former first-round pick. | Planking. |
| 3 What's the danger in Lollapalooza running concurrently with a Cubs home series? | It'll be "D-bag Armageddon 2: The Bro-genning." (In case you're wondering, No. 1 was DMB at Wrigley.) | Chads and Trixies won't know where to gather; many will drown in Lake Michigan. | The danger of losing fans of bad baseball to bad music. Could happen. | People may go see some overpaid disappointments for an inflated price, and then there's Lollapalooza. | Both have the same ticket prices. |
| 4 The Fire travel to Vancouver this weekend. Does this bring back any bad memories? | Yeah, I still have a Bryant Reeves jersey. Cuts me deep, man. sniffle | Great memories! Last time Vancouver and fire got together, the Canucks had just lost. | There's soccer in Canada? Really? Is that a club sport up there or what? | Not since seeing Roberto Luongo completely implode into a quivering failure in the Stanley Cup. | Not really. But if Vancouver loses, expect another riot. |
| 5 The Rush's Arena Bowl life is on the line. How should they prepare to face Arizona? | Suit up Quigley, that's what we're doing in RedEye softball. We're coming for you, Gapers Block. | "Tecmo Bowl" offense: snap ball, run backward, throw Hail Mary into other end zone. Repeat. | If they didn't prepare, I don't think anyone would know. I'd take the week off. | It's Arizona, so they may want to make sure to have all their proper documentation, if you know what I mean. | Indoors (because it's, you know, arena football). |

Could Favre be headed to Miami? Dolphins won't rule it out

Stop us if you've heard this one before: Brett Favre might be coming out of retirement. Again.

This time, the veteran of 20 NFL seasons has been linked to the Miami Dolphins. For their part, the Dolphins did nothing to squelch the Favre talk.

"I can't rule anything out," coach Tony Sparano said when asked directly about a South Florida Sun-Sentinel column advocating on Favre's behalf.

Even if Favre isn't the answer in Miami, Sparano hinted the Dolphins are still looking for a No. 1 quarterback.

"We always have our eyes open and are always exploring possibilities," he said.

Why would Favre pick Miami if he unretired for a fourth time? For starters, there's the team's new offensive coordinator, Brian Daboll, who was Favre's quarterbacks coach in New York.

Also, there's the chance to be the starting quarterback. The Dolphins are not happy with Chad Henne, who Sparano said is the starter "right now." And fan's aren't happy with Henne either.

So is Favre taking his talents to South Beach? Time will tell.

Welcome back, Tiger Woods (above). First tourney after returning from injury, and you shoot 2-under par. And right after Rory McIlroy said "it would be an unbelievable effort if he was to come back and compete." That, Mr. McIlroy, is what we call bulletin-board material.

WITH SUPPORTERS LIKE THIS...

Much-maligned Miami Heat super-ego LeBron James took to Twitter on Wednesday to throw his support behind Denver Broncos quarterback Tim Tebow. Seriously. "Tim Tebow will succeed in the NFL," James posted. "He's a hard worker, a student of the game, a natural born leader and most of all a WINNER! It takes time and he'll be nice." Weird that he shows more passion for football than he does for fourth quarters of basketball games.

BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE

Hot on the heels of LeBron's vote of confidence, Tebow watched Kyle Orton take all the snaps with Denver's No. 1 offense in practice Thursday. Thanks for nothing, King Nothing.

TREATED

Kyle Orton, your neck beard is gone. And that's a good thing.

IN THE DOGHOUSE

Bears defensive end Marcus Harrison hasn't been able to practice because he came to camp out of shape, and I'm thinking, "can't you use some of those millions for a dietitian?" And, no, me being a grotesquely overweight canine doesn't prohibit me from criticizing a professional athlete whose primary responsibility is to be, you know, athletic enough to do his job.

» Though there weren't a lot of fireworks in Tiger Woods' return from a 12-week layoff, he already has a better round than at any time during last year's visit to the WGC-Bridgestone Invitational. A 2-under-par 68 left Woods inside the top 20 after Thursday's round.

MALE CALL

EMINEM, FOO FIGHTERS AND MORE MEN DOMINATE THE Lolla 2011 HEADLINERS

By Matt Pais

REDEYE

Based on this year's 20th anniversary Lolla headliners, fest organizers clearly have one goal in mind: packing as many sweaty dudes into Grant Park as possible.

Revitalized rapper Eminem's (8:30 p.m. Saturday) aggressive flow and subject matter should attract a field full of men (who may or may not hate their exes) looking for a profanity-laced way to release some anger. The Foo Fighters' (8 p.m. Sunday) muscular rock explosions practically demand adrenaline-fueled shout-alongs and high-fives. And My Morning Jacket (8 p.m. Saturday), whose members only recently discovered that hair can be cut/shaved, turn Southern rock into spaced-out, exhilaratingly exhausting jams.

Even if Lolla doesn't boast the big-name, headlining females of the past, such as Lady Gaga or the Yeah Yeah Yeahs' Karen O, Coldplay (8:15 p.m. Friday) could fill the bill as the top line's nod to women. After all, once you call a song "Every Teardrop is a Waterfall," your man card should permanently be revoked, no matter who your wife is. The increasingly earnest, anthemic Brit pop-rockers surely will counter the rest of the headliners' testosterone-stravaganza, as will underwhelming, glammy English rockers Muse (8:15 p.m. Friday) and rising electronic star Deadmau5 (8:30 p.m. Sunday).

Finally, mashup master Girl Talk (8:45 p.m. Friday), whose performances practically define "everyone cram together and dance like crazy and don't worry if half of the sweat and elbows in your space don't belong to you," will bring the party for everyone.

Fortunately, it's not as if the only acts worth hearing are the ones with top billing, or as if there are zero women performing among the more than 130 bands appearing throughout the weekend. Read on for our fave women of the fest, our top overall picks and a lot more about Lolla '11. MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MUSIC PRODUCER. MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM | @MATTPAIS

FAN-SPOTTING

Admit it: You've looked at fans at music festivals and assumed what band they were there to see. Appearances can be deceiving, and plenty of people out there have diverse enough musical tastes to flock to a variety of sounds, regardless of who's on their T-shirt or what inspired that Mohawk. Still, every band has its stereotypical fan. M.P.

FOO FIGHTERS

High-fiving, beer-drinking bros who'd give their left arm to race Dave Grohl to the bottom of a bottle

EMINEM

Angry white boys opposed to equality for women and shirts with sleeves

COLDPLAY

Sensitive suburbanites prone to journaling and following Gwyneth Paltrow's recipes

10 LADIES TO NOT MISS

Forget those headliners and their Y chromosomes. These female artists (or female-fronted bands) represent some of Lolla's best this weekend and shouldn't be missed, even if you are arriving early just to get a good spot for Eminem or Coldplay. M.P.

The Joy Formidable

1 p.m. Sun. at Bud Light stage

The Welsh trio's full-length debut, "The Big Roar," is exactly that, and the band, fronted by tiny powerhouse Ritzy Bryan, is an early pick to click as a band that wins an entire crowd of new followers at Lolla.

Lia Ices

2:30 p.m. Sun. at BMI stage

The haunting singer-songwriter could be drowned out in a large fest environment. If her songs from "Grown Unknown" have room to breathe, fans will be transfixed.

Grace Potter and the Nocturnals

2:30 p.m. Fri. at Bud Light stage

The pop-rock band reportedly owned North Coast Music Festival last year, and Potter's absolutely a frontwoman to watch.

Wye Oak

Noon Fri. at Sony stage

The Baltimore duo (featuring Jenn Wasner) is on the short list of bands that evoke the most sound and feeling with only two people. The new album, "Civilian," doesn't let you go.

Ellie Goulding

6 p.m. Sat. at Google+ stage

This highly buzzed British singer, who has played "Saturday Night Live," could be a much bigger name after the fest.

Gold Motel

12:15 p.m. Sun.

at PlayStation stage

Former Hush Sound singer Greta Morgan fronts this Chicago band that is absolutely perfect for summer. Pop bliss.

Lissie

4:30 p.m. Sun.

at Google+ stage

The Rock Island native has a voice that just can't be denied.

Tennis

1 p.m. Fri. at Google+ stage

No, songs by this band (featuring Alaina Moore) aren't about tennis, but they're breezy and appealing in a way that wouldn't necessarily distract you from your serve.

Lykke Li

7:15 p.m. Sat. at Google+ stage

The recent album "Wounded Rhymes" takes a big step up in the drama department, and rumor has it her live shows elevate Li's brokenhearted jabs even further.

Imelda May

1:30 p.m. Sun. at Sony stage

Classic and sassy, this rockabilly singer should burn up the stage.

ACTS TO SEE

Eminem and Coldplay might be the headliners of Lollapalooza 2011, but I'm more excited for Foo Fighters' muscular rock explosions and Girl Talk's unrelenting dance party, housed on the now-larger Perry's stage. Here are my Top 10 acts to see this weekend. MATT PAIS, REDEYE

Cee Lo Green

6:30 p.m. Sat.
 at Q Music Unlimited stage

The soul singer with the incomparable voice can turn an F-bomb into a gloriously triumphant pop kiss-off and a robust belly into the mark of a showman whose stature just makes him that much more of a stud. Can't wait to see what kind of party he starts.

Manchester Orchestra

7 p.m. Sun. at Google+ stage

Andy Hull's band is an absolute beast on stage, and songs from the new "Simple Math" add bright horns to the group's thunderous attack and Hull's fest-filling wail.

Girl Talk

8:45 p.m. Fri. at Perry's stage

For 2011 Perry's DJ stage is doubling in size, and it's a good thing: Gregg Gillis/Girl Talk will draw a gigantic crowd of sweaty dance machines, who aren't going to concern themselves with personal space.

J. Roddy Walston and the Business

Noon Sat. at PlayStation stage

Call it a rollicking boogie. Call it a party. Call these soulful Tennessee rockers' set anything you want. Just don't miss it. Especially recommended for Kings of Leon fans.

The Joy Formidable

1 p.m. Sun. at Bud Light stage

Foo Fighters

8 p.m. Sun.
 at Q Music Unlimited stage

This year's best act on the fest's top line (sorry, Eminem, Coldplay and Muse), Dave Grohl's blazing rock band will fill Grant Park with slashing guitars and a muscular rhythm section that will have the ground throbbing. Tracks off the excellent new "Wasting Light" will soar.

Atmosphere

7:30 p.m. Sat. at Sony stage

I'm very eager to finally see the Minneapolis hip-hop outfit live. Though recent albums have been spare social commentary rather than head-nodding attacks of snark, I have nothing but faith in Slug and Co. to give fans what they want, as well as what they don't know they need.

Arctic Monkeys

6 p.m. Sun. at
 Q Music Unlimited stage

The English snots don't necessarily play what audiences want to hear, but they're a tremendous live band anyway (and my favorite performance at Lolla 2009). The terrific new "Suck It and See" will continue the group's habit of landing on year's-best lists.

GRAHAMWICH'S LOBSTER CORN DOG

LOLLA'S BEST EATS

How many music festivals can say they have star power in the food court as well as onstage? Chef Graham Elliot has returned for the second year as Lollapalooza culinary director, again recruiting some rock-star local restaurants to fill the Chow Town food court. Besides his own Grahamwich booth that'll dole out his signature lobster corn dog (a Lolla special not served at the sandwich shop), more than 30 other booths will serve up snacks priced $5-$8. Because we know you'll be busy rocking out, we've broken out some must-try eats to help focus your food-court runs.

Must-try: The scallop motoyaki, a cheap way to get a taste of luxury from this American contemporary restaurant that typically does elaborate (and expensive) multicourse meals.

Also serving: Wisconsin fried cheese curds, Japanese chips and guacamole

Franks'n' Dawgs

1863 N. Clybourn Ave.

Must-try: The chicken tikka flatbread. Consider this snack a preview of the Indian street food that could be served from Juhu Beach, a food truck that West Loop restaurant Veerasway has in the planning stages (owner Angela Lee tells us she's waiting to see if legislation changes come through to allow on-board cooking).

Also serving: Veggie samosas, sweet potato chaat fries

CHOW TOWN SOUTH NEAR BALBO AVENUE

YOUR GUIDE TO FINDING CELEBS AT LOLLA

about last night

LUIS GOMEZ
lgomez
@tribune.com

Lollapalooza, according to “Rushmore” star and former Phantom Planet drummer Jason Schwartzman, is a little like the 1986 animated film “Care Bears Movie II: A New Generation.”

He can explain. Sort of.

“The bands stay in one hotel and hang out in the lobby together and go to see each other’s show,” Schwartzman said the Monday after last year’s Lollapalooza. “That makes me happy. It’s like the Care Bears movie where the Care Bears and the Care Bears Cousins join forces to take on the evil wizard at summer camp. It always gave me chills.”

Schwartzman is right. Many of the artists do stay at one hotel and spend much of the reunionlike weekend supporting one another. Why? Because artists like hanging out with other artists. And they like going to places where other artists have been. With Lollapalooza setting up shop for three more days of rock, hip-hop and dance music mayhem starting Friday, if you look in the right places, you just might see them out en masse.

The day after Pearl Jam headlined Lolla in 2007, frontman Eddie Vedder, Kid Rock and Big & Rich’s John Rich attended a charity event hosted by former Blackhawk Chris Chelios at Stanley’s Kitchen & Tap.

Fellow Lincoln Park bar Delilah’s also has a reputation for drawing rockers. Two nights before last year’s Lollapalooza, however, it hosted Lady Gaga.

Many artists will attend after-parties during Lolla simply because they like or are friends with the band performing, as Schwartzman pointed out. Lolla founder and Jane’s Addiction singer Perry Farrell, Depeche Mode’s Martin Gore and Soundgarden band members have all been on hand for the annual after-shows at Metro, which this year features Cold War Kids and Atmosphere.

If a Lolla artist is unfamiliar with Chicago’s night-life scene, the Hard Rock Hotel—which hosts several of the acts as well as celebrity gift suites and after-parties for the event—keeps a list of recommendations for its famous clientele. The concierge recommends Publican, Moto and Sunda for dinner, the Violet Hour and the Aviary for cocktails, and the Underground for clubbing.

Hard Rock hosted the famous Music Lounge parties the past five years, but this year’s VIP parties, collectively dubbed the Belve Music Lounge, will take place at the W Chicago-City Center Hotel. (Hard Rock’s parties now will take place in Angels & Kings, in the hotel’s lobby, and will feature a performance by A&K co-owner Pete Wentz’s new band, Black Cards.) The Music Lounge booked up-and-coming performers for its after-parties in years past—it wasn’t that long ago that unknown Ke$ha took the stage—and this year will do the same. Skylar Grey, Two Door Cinema Club, and Fitz and The Tantrums are scheduled to perform, and Grace Potter of Grace Potter and the Nocturnals will DJ. @ABOUTLUISGOMEZ

CELEB STALKING PREP

If you want to meet a celebrity during Lollapalooza—whether it’s outside a hotel or at an after-show venue—follow the tips below from local celeb fanatic and photo hound Eduardo Ramirez. The 19-year-old Dominican University student has met past and present Lolla performers Lady Gaga, Lupe Fiasco, Taylor Momsen, Skylar Grey and Janelle Monae without ever being on a VIP list.

Twitter is a must

“Twitter is a big help. I learned Lady Gaga was in town through her drummer on Twitter.”

Look for SUVs and tour buses

“If I see SUVs or tour buses outside a hotel, I go ask the driver if it’s anyone famous. Some drivers are nice and will tell you.”

Know where to stand

“Always go to the back door of a [concert] venue. The artist isn’t coming in through the front.”

Avoid trespassing

“It has worked, but I don’t recommend it. If you get caught waiting in the hotel lobby or something, you get kicked out and can’t stand anywhere close to the venue.”

Stay calm

“Security at the Peninsula [Hotel] once yelled at me for running up to Simon Cowell and screaming his name. You need to remain calm. Walking over and waving works better.”

Bring a permanent marker

Or two: “This is crucial. And because the celeb sometimes takes your Sharpie and doesn’t return it, bring two pens if you’re waiting to meet two celebs.”

PATRICK STUMP

TRIBUNE

This year's local-band offering at Lolla vastly bests the Chicago-based crop of Lolla 2010. (Ike Reilly Assassination, seriously?) Here are 10 (current or former) Chicago artists worth catching this weekend. MATT PAIS, REDEYE

Patrick Stump

The Glenview native/ex-Fall Out Boy singer's recent show at Schubas—a funktacular workout for Stump's golden pipes—could have won over even the biggest Fall Out Boy bashers.

Black Cards
5:30 p.m. Fri.
at BMI stage

Wilmette native (and former Fall Out Boy) Pete Wentz's new band with singer Bebe Rexha tackles electro-pop that, at the very least, is a change of pace from FOB.

OK Go
7:15 p.m. Fri.
at Google+ stage

Formed in Chicago, the now L.A.-based band delivered a surprisingly effective take on Prince with its latest album, "Of the Colour of the Blue Sky."

Local rockers pack power and edge onto their acclaimed sophomore disc, "Guider."

Chicagoans deliver scampering pop twisted by unusual arrangements and a voice that you'll either love or hate.

Cool Kids
3 p.m. Sun.
at Perry's stage
The hip-hop duo of Chuck Inglish and Mikey Rocks has had a rough time getting the group off the ground (immense buzz notwithstanding), but the long-awaited, just-dropped "When Fish Ride Bicycles" should finally have them moving in the right direction.

Andy Serkis goes ape again

'Rings' actor at center of 'Rise of the Planet of the Apes'

The Orlando Sentinel

Andy Serkis doesn't see himself as "the king of performance capture," the title recently bestowed upon the actor most famous for his groundbreaking turn as Gollum in "The Lord of the Rings" movies.

"I don't think there's such a thing as a performance-capture or motion-capture actor," Serkis says. "Any actor can do it. I've just embraced it, is all."

Indeed he has. The 47-year-old English actor, who played the great ape King Kong, has two roles in this winter's performance-capture animated "The Adventures of Tintin," and is reprising Gollum in Peter Jackson's two-part film of "The Hobbit."

He's also the simian hero in "Rise of the Planet of the Apes," which opens Friday.

For each performance, Serkis dons a dot-covered suit and has dots painted on his face. Computers and computers "capture" his performance, which is then animated. Serkis calls this "digital makeup," and notes how much more expressive and subtle it is than the rubber prosthetics and masks that actresses from Kim Hunter to Helena Bonham Carter have had to wear to play apes in the earlier films.

In a decade of doing performance capture work, Serkis says "the technology has become more transparent, more elegant. The most significant change between the first time I donned the suit is that we can now shoot all my scenes on the set with the other actors. So now, instead of acting with the other actors and then going off ... to shoot the performance-capture work at a later date, I can do it all in one hit. It has that intimacy and immediacy, the alchemy between actors on the set is back. They're reacting to the real me."

In "Rise of the Planet of the Apes," Serkis plays Caesar, a chimpanzee who is given a drug that makes him super-intelligent. He lives with humans until that fateful day when he is torn from his "family," and once penned up among the apes, he figures out how to lead them in revolt.

Caesar has "a fascinating arc, as a character, since I get to play him from childhood until the revolt," Serkis says. And because Serkis had already played a gorilla, "I'd already done a lot of the primate research I needed to figure out their movements, posture. When I played Kong. I spent a lot of time in zoos, and I went to Rwanda to study mountain gorillas. And when I was in Rwanda, I was lucky enough to literally hang out with a young orphan chimpanzee."

He wore arm extensions to get his body closer to a chimp's shape and rehearsed the physicality of the role. "And once you've learned how to calibrate your movements to the computer-generated puppet of Caesar ... you can start to think about the character—who he is and how he might think."

Serkis says performance-capture acting work "is liberating, because you're both the puppet and the puppeteer." And that makes him want to share what he knows with others.

He's starting a motion-capture studio for filmmakers and an academy for performance capture actors in London. The Imaginarium will emphasize "that this is a filmmaking

What is Franco up to now?

Detroit Free Press

Some performers stick to a diet of predictable choices. James Franco approaches life as a feast of opportunities.

Franco

The 33-year-old actor has appeared in superhero movies, comedies, socially relevant dramas, small art films and a TV soap opera. He's studied at a bunch of colleges. He writes. He paints. He directs. He's involved in avant-garde art projects and electronic music.

"I only work on things that I'm passionate about," Franco says by phone of his artistic multitasking.

Franco is in Pontiac, Mich., to make "Oz: The Great and Powerful." But he's talking "Rise of the Planet of the Apes," which opens Friday. It's a prequel of sorts to 1968's "Planet of the Apes" starring Charlton Heston as an astronaut stranded in a world ruled by talking chimps, gorillas and orangutans.

Franco plays Will Rodman, a scientist whose research subject, a chimp named Caesar he has made super-intelligent through drug experiments, is imprisoned. Cue the revolutionary battle teased in the previews.

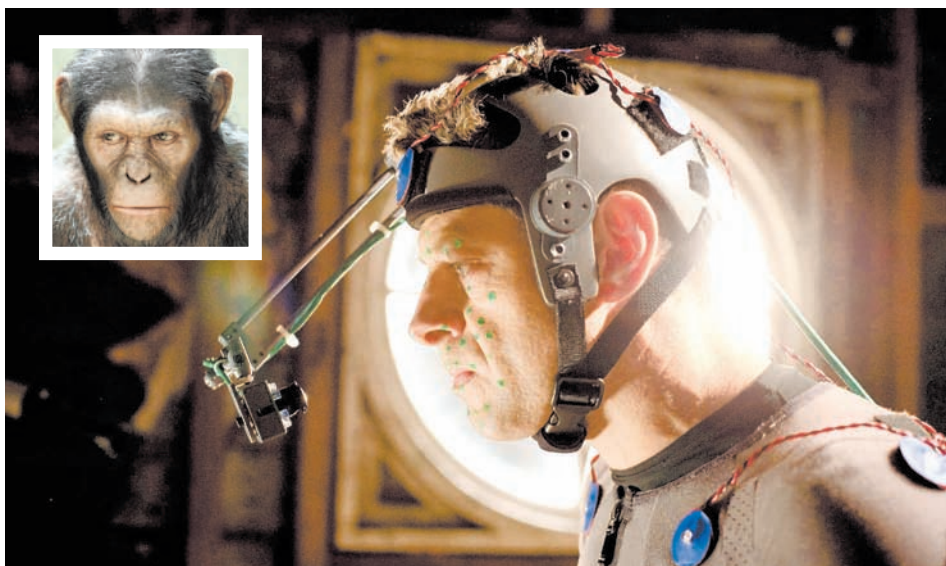

This isn't Franco's first brush with ape movies. He co-wrote, directed and starred in 2005's "The Ape," about a writer who moves in with a talking, shirt-wearing gorilla.

"Both movies push boundaries of what a realistic ape could do, giving them more human qualities than a normal ape would have," Franco says. "That pushing of the boundaries of reality is possible because they are so close to us. ... They're great metaphors or analogies to how we are and who we are and how we treat each other."

"Rise of the Planet of the Apes" is grounded in issues of the day, in this case, the moral complexities of scientific research.

"I am optimistic about science," Franco says. "The experiments that we're pretending to do in this film are to cure Alzheimer's. I think that's fine. What's questionable about the way the scientists in the film are working is how they treat the animals, how they test the animals, how disposable they are."

In real life, Franco doesn't have chimps, but he does brag about his two cats. "They're very loving and have great personalities," he says, laughing. "Said like a true cat owner."

tool," not a "genre of acting. I think of it as digital makeup, really, not as a genre."

Lesson one in his Performance Capture 101 class? "You don't have to over-pantomime the emotions you're portraying. Trust the technology. It's very sensitive. Everything that you're feeling will come through. You don't have to pull faces."

And lesson two? "You have to create an internal physical energy beyond which you can't drop. You have to be more in the moment than ever. You can't just limply stand there."

Will (James Franco) is just trying to develop a drug that will cure Alzheimer's. Will's certainly not trying to create an army of super-intelligent chimpanzees that band together to conquer mankind. But you know what they say about good intentions and the road to hell.

The buzz: At last this CGI-filled prequel can answer the nagging question from fans of the 1968 film: How did this ape society get started?

The verdict: Either make the apes' progression of power intense and frightening or ridiculous and fun. Trying for both doesn't work, and "Rise" frustratingly hops between serious sci-fi and campy, go-for-broke absurdity. The effects, however, are fantastic. MATT PAIS IS REDEYE'S MOVIE CRITIC

COWBOYS AND ALIENS

@vincentanzalone: Cboys & Aliens: Craig's still stoic and Ford still hard to dislike. Film moves & finishes well. If u think u'll like it, ur right.

@MCapp22: "Cowboys & Aliens" was a fun shoot 'em up movie. Daniel Craig & Harrison Ford are great! Explosions, scares & lots of action!

@CYLoThreePeas: I thought Cowboys vs. Aliens was pretty entertaining. Great humor and enjoyable. Realistic? Naaa..

@xoxoRuth: Cowboys & Aliens: two hours I can't take back..Should have watched Winnie the Pooh.

@iamplanttastic: Cowboys & Aliens: everything the 4th Indiana Jones should have been (and wanted to be) with the added bonus of Daniel Craig.

@DrFawkes: Cowboys/ Aliens: You never showed us Wilde nude. Damn you, Mr. Favreau. Damn you. Also: Indy needs a walker; Bond: a martini.

@fardmuhammad: Cowboys & Aliens. Wonderful, entertaining film. Show me a name that's cooler than "Dollarhyde." You can't. There are none.

@pHJason: Cowboys & Aliens is exactly that. No more, no less. Notice its not called Cowboys, Aliens, Good Writing & Plot.

@salkken: In Cowboys vs Aliens, I kept waiting for Harrison Ford to say, "And I thought they smelled bad on the outside."

FRIENDS WITH BENEFITS

@alexhamdria: Friends with Benefits is obvi a must-see cuz of @jtimberlake's butt BUT Woody Harrelson makes the movie with his one-liners

@ChrisLKeller: Friends with Benefits > Hangover 2: Timberlake being Timberlake; Kunis being Kunis. Work together really well.

@Dragana_Noelle: "friends with benefits" perfect combination of comedy, wit, sex, realism, & an actual story line. Awesome date movie!

CAPTAIN AMERICA

@ppayton1974: Captain America had just the right amount of cheese for a comic book movie. Chris Evans def playing against type for a change

@ryanj123: Captain America 3D: good effects, decent storyline, wouldn't see it again.

@VincentJV: Captain America: Chris Evans is hot, the plot is not... Ironic, b/c America's real life Captain has also failed recently.

OTHERS

@MatthewGaydos: Attack The Block was completely original and extremely entertaining, with great monsters

@shemoos: saw Another Earth & it was wondrous. The plot, the reality, the sci-fi all blended like a symphony. It left you wanting more @chowbelle: The Devil's Double: Graphic and captivating portrayal of Uday Hussein's body double circa Persian Gulf War.

CRAZY STUPID LOVE

@Ms_SilverScreen: Crazy, Stupid, Love is a romcom that thinks outside the box. Gosling and Stone are so talented. Fantastic, clever film.

@statunicorn: CSL: Great moments few & far between, but Steve & Ryan both surprised, in a good way. But, since when is Emma S. neurotic?

@kpduty8: I saw "Crazy, stupid, love." ABSolutely amazing! Funny, dramatic, romantic (not just a chick flick either) - go see it!

@JordanBurns3: Saw Crazy, Stupid Love. Thought it was great--one of the best movies I have seen this summer! Great cast with a great story!

@monalisette30: #CrazyStupidLove was crazy stupid loved! One of my faves this year. Surprises, beauty, heart. Loved every bit. Go Robbie!

@Criss4291: crazy stupid love made me fall in love... With the guy next to me who I didn't know... Beware when you go watch this.

Body switching only quasi works

'The Change-Up'

R

The grass is always greener, whether you're a highly paid, married father of three (like Dave, played by Jason Bateman) or a sexual dynamo making zilch as an actor and getting high all day (like Mitch, played by Ryan Reynolds). So Dave and Mitch drunkenly say "I wish I had your life" in unison while peeing in a fountain and bada bing, the longtime best friends wake up the next morning in each other's bodies. Careful what you wish for after a night of shots.

The buzz: The body-switcheroo plotline may have been done once or twice before, but it does offer Reynolds and Bateman a chance to play the opposite of their usual playboy and tightwad, respectively.

The verdict: "The Change-Up" generates several laughs when its jokes aren't based in sexism, racism or the physical/emotional damage of children, which they usually are. There's nothing wrong with a movie having fun with bad taste ("Bad Teacher" fared better and funnier). The mean-spirited "Change-Up," on the other hand, celebrates Mitch's d-bag behavior that grants its guys carte blanche to be cruel and juvenile.

Pets as metaphor for life

How big of a step is adopting a cat? Well, Sophie (Miranda July) and Jason (Hamish Linklater) determine that when they take ownership of Paw-Paw, their freedom to do what they want is essentially over. So they (the humans, not the cat) quit their awful jobs and allow incidental occurrences to drive them toward activities more deserving of their time, as if the universe is telling them something and they've only just now started listening.

The verdict: There's plenty in "The Future" that many will diagnose as "weird," but July, who also wrote and directed, never does anything simply because it will be taken that way. Paw-Paw's voiceover (July again) chronicles an animal that can't wait for its life to begin, while the cat's "parents" are actually preparing for theirs to end. "The Future" spectacularly confronts the speed of life and all the reasons we make up to delay the decisions that could make life more fulfilling or interesting.

Dominic Cooper and Dominic Cooper in 'The Devil's Double'

Cooper exudes charm in 'Devil'

fast paused

twitter.com/
mattpais

Saddam Hussein's son Uday (Dominic Cooper) is such a giver: He generously invites/kidnaps underage girls back to his home, and he forces guests at his birthday party to strip down so, uh, they can be a little cooler. For many reasons this guy has loads of enemies and several responsibilities he avoids, so he enlists look-alike Latif (also played by Cooper), a much-friendlier guy, to be his on-call stand-in. It's kinda like "Multiplicity" with only one duplicate and a lot more bullets.

The verdict: So apparently Latif was a guy who always kept his hands clean and slept with Uday's favorite gal (Ludivine Sagnier of "Swimming Pool") with no consequences. Whether or not that's true, "The Devil's Double" presents its relationships without convincing depth and threatens to become just another flashy, occasionally nasty tale of drugs, guns, henchmen and babes in bikinis. Luckily Cooper's magnetic in both roles; he shows that Uday's not a confident madman, just a privileged, immature brat (who's also dripping with cruelty) looking for any form of support system. He is cocky enough to wear a cowboy hat with matching Hawaiian shirt and shorts, however, because who dares to make fun?

'The Devil's Double'

Crime flick works

Sgt. Boyle
(Brendan Gleeson)

is a cop who's neither by-the-book nor full-on corrupt. He's also a pain in the butt to FBI agent Everett (Don Cheadle), who comes to Ireland to investigate a drug trafficking operation's movement of $500 million in cocaine—an emphasis on "street value" that Boyle thinks is crap.

The verdict: "The Guard" gains reality points for unfolding at the slow pace of crime and police work, but that's also why the movie never fully takes off. Doesn't matter. Boyle's a badass fountain of snappy lines (one favorite, as he walks into the station: "Big map. People pointing. Must be important."). "The Guard" does nothing if not prove that a crime flick usually succeeds when led by two great actors playing strong characters.

"Spartacus: Vengeance" will premiere in January on Starz. Watch the Season 2 trailer and a video interview with Lucy Lawless at showpatroltv.com

Vengeance reigns in new 'Spartacus'

When the Starz hit "Spartacus" returns in January, it'll have a new leading man in Liam McIntyre, a new title, "Vengeance," and its leading lady, Lucy Lawless, will look a bit bedraggled.

"[Lucretia's] somewhat worse for wear," Lawless told reporters at San Diego Comic-Con a few weeks ago, talking about her formerly glamorous character, who was stabbed and nearly killed in the show's first season.

The exciting trailer shown at Comic-Con introduced the new Spartacus, Liam McIntyre. He replaces former star Andy Whitfield, who had to bow out of the show to battle cancer. Earlier this year, Starz and the show's producers came up with a prequel to the first season called "Spartacus: Gods of the Arena," that focused on another gladiator named Gannicus (Dustin Clare).

The Season 2 preview shows that Gannicus will be back, and it chronicles Lawless' dramatic entrance as Lucretia, who stuns her old frenemy, Ilithyia (Viva Bianca), by being alive. The last time we saw Ilithyia in Season 1, she was ordering her men to block the door to Lucretia's villa, leaving Lucretia, her husband and their guests at the mercy of Spartacus and the gladiators, who were revolting against their enslavement. Batiatus was killed; somehow Lucretia survived.

"She's lost her beloved husband. She's lost her child. She's lost all the promise of the nuclear family. That's why the show's called 'Vengeance,'" Lawless said, laughing. "She's lost a great deal of status, as you can imagine. It's a moment-to-moment struggle for survival for the rest of the season. But she's got a master plan."

When asked if Lucretia will eventually get her groove back, Lawless laughed: "Yes, she does, and it ain't the groove you think."

Lucretia will focus her vengeance not on Spartacus but on Crixus (Manu Bennett), the father of her child, whom he killed when he stabbed Lucretia. Lawless teased that the "epic" season also will focus on the relationship between Lucretia and Ilithyia.

"Need is what drives them together, and they ain't happy about it," she cracked. "There are a lot of reasons to be together, and a lot of reasons to want to kill one another. ... Our relationship is delicious."

FEST FRIDAYS

SERB FEST

Where: Holy Resurrection Cathedral, 5701 Redwood Drive Info: serbfestchicago.com
Time: 5 p.m.-midnight Friday, noon-midnight Saturday, 9:30 a.m.-10 p.m. Sunday
Tip: Catch a free shuttle to the fest from the Cumberland Blue Line station

You've been Serbed

Check out a mini menu of delicious meats and treats from this weekend's Serb Fest

Looking to get away from the Lollapalooza madness this weekend? A little off the beaten path, Serb Fest returns this year with more Serbian music favorites, volleyball and basketball tournaments and, most important, some amazing ethnic eats. What's on the menu? We have a few picks and translations for you. JESSICA GALLIART, REDEYE

Raznjici

Translation: Skewered meat. The term is widely used throughout the Balkans and Eastern Europe.

Cevapi

Translation: Grilled minced meat. The Serbian dish consisting of eight to 10 pieces is served with bread, salt and chopped onions and is a favorite in Serbia.

Palacinke

Translation: Crepe-like, Croatian pancakes. You can eat these for lunch or dinner, however, and they usually include different types of fillings.

Krofne

Translation: Kind of like doughnuts. Think: Polish paczki or sweet doughnuts, much like beignets.

BBQ pigs

Translation: Does this need more of an explanation?

1 Roka Akor Sushi & Steak 111 W. Illinois St. 312-477-7652
This new River North sushi bar/robata grill is continuing to gain fans.

"The rumors about @Rokaakorchi are true. I had a fabulous dinner last night!"
—@AURBAN7 ON TWITTER

2 Angels & Kings 230 N. Michigan Ave. 312-334-6722
Since relocating from River North earlier this year, this tiny lounge in the Hard Rock Hotel is now perfectly placed for post-Lollapalooza relaxing.

3 Fül 3310 N. Broadway 773-525-0240
This health-centric Lakeview cafe (pronounced "fuel," not "fool" or "full") serves up sandwiches, salads and smoothies.

4 Francesca's Forno 1576 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-770-0184
This revamped Wicker Park spot's new menu of Italian small plates seems to be going over well.

"This is not your boring pasta place. Everything on the menu is interesting, fresh and certainly well thought out." —A2K630 ON METROMIX.COM

5 Debonair Social Club 1575 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-227-7990
Look for this Wicker Park spot to be packed this weekend with Lolla after-parties, and watch for appearances by celebs such as Elijah Wood, Brie Larson and more.

Don your best people-watching glasses and check off the antics you see

By Ariel Alexovich
REDEYE

Like a good scout, we're prepared for Lollapalooza. That is, we've sifted through the endless "don't miss" guides and we've got our game plans figured out (go early to hit up Rainbow Cone; get up front for the best, sweatiest Girl Talk experience). But as much as we plan, we know we'll still have some downtime in Grant Park this weekend, whether it's chilling before the Eminem show or waiting in line for a Porta-Potty. To fill these voids, we suggest you do a little people-watching and tick off the items below as you observe them. Your prize? Congratulations, you just killed 5 minutes. It's almost your turn at the Porta-Potty.

Mumford & Mulligan

Well, that was speedy. "An Education" actress Carey Mulligan is engaged to her boyfriend of five months, Mumford & Sons singer Marcus Mumford, according to Us Weekly. The way the mag tells it, the two were childhood pen pals in London and reconnected at a party with Jake Gyllenhaal. Naturally.

Not like the others ...

MTV announced Thursday it has added the Best Video With a Message category to the Video Music Awards, which air at 8 p.m. Aug. 28. The nominees: Pink's "[Bleeping] Perfect," Taylor Swift's "Mean," Katy Perry's "Firework," Lady Gaga's "Born This Way" and Rise Against's "Make It Stop (September's Children)." Oh, and Eminem's "Love the Way You Lie." That last one might be a tough sell.

Can't stop Clooney

If you thought George Clooney, Hollywood's icon of bachelorhood, would lie low after ending his two-year relationship with girlfriend Elisabetta Canalis, guess again. Life & Style reports that the Oscar-winning actor has only been, you know, hanging with "Dancing with the Stars" beauty Stacy Keibler. In Italy. What a guy.

Soap opera slayer

Sarah Michelle Gellar's got a busy fall lined up. Not only does her new show, "Ringer," debut at 8 p.m. Sept. 13 on the CW, she's also headed back to her old stomping grounds at "All My Children," eonline.com reports. Gellar will appear in one of the final episodes of the show, on which she won a daytime Emmy in 1995, but not as her original character. Surely no one will notice she's been gone.

It's time to get even MORE excited about the all-star season of "America's Next Top Model." This season of Tyra Banks' pose-fest, which premieres at 8 p.m. Sept. 14 on the CW, will feature a mishmash of guest judges, including Nicki Minaj, Kathy Griffin, LaToya Jackson, Ashlee Simpson and Kristin Cavallari, eonline.com reports. Don't forget your hair spray.
